FOREWORD

1716902

TODAY, possibly more than in any other period of our history, young men are charged with the responsibilities of leadership. It is true they have taken advantage of that opportunity and, as a result, in all phases of American life young men are taking their places in the affairs of government, commerce, industry, civic life, science, art, education, agriculture, and the professions. Almost overnight these men are finding their way into national and international fame.

AMERICA'S YOUNG MEN was founded, and Volume One published, in September, 1934, so that a permanent record of the achievements of young men might be available. In addition to the lives of those whose accomplishments are familiar to all of us, it chronicles the lives of those whose limits have not yet been reached, thus, it contains information about individuals not available in any other volume. This edition, Volume Two, adds to the records contained in the first work, and gives the advancements made since 1934. It also contains hundreds of new biographies not included in Volume One.

We have found that many persons are interested in knowing the source of our information. We are both pleased and proud of the unusual cooperation we have had. We are happy to acknowledge it here and to publicly express our appreciation. Volume Two contains 6010 biographies, as compared to 4182 in Volume One. These biographies were selected from over nineteen thousand recommended names sent to us by alumni officers, business and professional leaders, and educators. We are convinced that such a procedure has made the selection authentic and representative.

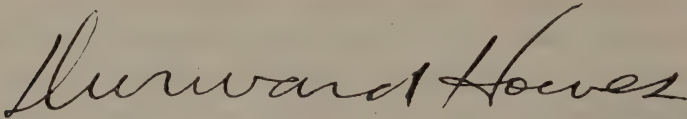

Information was sent to us on our questionnaires (a sample copy on page 19) by each individual. It was from these questionnaires that the biographies were judged and written. Every effort was made to obtain the biographies of all the outstanding young men. In some instances they did not respond to our request and, inasmuch as all of our biographical material was obtained from this source, it was impossible to include certain ones. The absence of their biographies cannot, therefore, be charged to our oversight. It is, of course, impossible for anyone to buy a listing in AMERICA'S YOUNG MEN, and no one is under any obligation to purchase a book.

The Statistical Summary is informative and interesting. A study of these statistics will reveal what the young men of America think of education, marriage, religion, and politics. They also give the hobbies, favorite recreations, and sports. A comparison of the statistics in Volume One and Volume Two is of unusual interest.

Volume Two contains a Geographical Index which provides a quick reference of local leaders by city and state. As an added feature, it also contains an Occupational Index. This should prove a valuable reference not only for business executives but also for educators and students of vocational guidance who are interested in knowing the occupational trend of our successful young leaders.

At no time in the history of our country have America's young men had a greater opportunity to serve their country and their fellowman than at the present. It is important and interesting to become familiar with the biographies of the men whose influence will guide America in the years to come, and who will mould and build the character of future generations.

YOUNG MEN IN HISTORY

The pages of history are filled with the outstanding accomplishments of young men. Alexander the Great had conquered and ruled the then-known world before he was 30. Napoleon was 27 when he was crowned Emperor of the French. William Pitt served as Chancellor of the Exchequer at 23 and as Prime Minister of Great Britain at 24. Patrick Henry was 27 when he delivered his famous speech against the Stamp Act. Shakespeare had completed ten of his greatest plays at 32. Sir Isaac Newton was 24 when he formulated the law of gravitation. Robert Louis Stevenson had completed Treasure Island at 33, and Charles Dickens was 25 when he wrote Oliver Twist.

American history vividly recalls the activities of young men. George Washington, as a youth of 23, led the Virginia troops against the French and Indians. The Declaration of Independence was written by Thomas Jefferson when he was 35; John Hancock's famed signature was attached when he was 39. The average age of all the delegates to the Constitutional Convention was 41 years. James Madison, who has been referred to as the "father of the Constitution," was 36 when in attendance at the Constitutional Convention. Alexander Hamilton at 32 was the first Secretary of the Treasury. Abraham Lincoln was 24 when he first campaigned for public office. George B. McClellan, Lincoln's first general, was Commander-in-chief of the Union Army at 34. John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, at 36, was the youngest vice-president in our history. Eli Whitney was 29 when he invented the cotton gin. Thomas Edison had given the world the benefit of many of his greatest inventions when he was still a young man. McCormick had invented the reaper, and Westinghouse, the air brakes, when each was only 23. The Wright brothers had flown the first airplane when they were in their early thirties.

To the best of our knowledge, this is the first time a Who's Who has included a comprehensive occupational index. You will find this index depicts accurately the occupational trend of the nation's younger leaders. It will also be of value to those interested in vocational guidance and its application to the younger generation, as well as to the business and professional executives who seek the names of leaders in their respective fields.

Every effort was made to list each person under the proper classification. In some cases this was extremely difficult—any unavoidable errors will be corrected for Volume Three. In order to make the listing more complete, some names are included in more than one classification.
